- Pack will provide plates, utensils, etc for meals as well as hand soap for washing
- Cotton is bad, wool is good. Cotton retains moisture. Blue jeans and sweat pants are not advisable for winter camping, although dry sweat pants or jeans can be worn in the cabin
- Layering is important. One-piece snowmobile suits are good only when inactive and not recommended for winter campouts. Throughout the day boys will be active, and need to wear layers of clothing that can be added and removed.
- Putting clean, dry socks and underwear on when going to bed is crucial. That night's underwear and socks can be worn the next day, as long as you have another dry set for the next night
- Dehydration can help cause hypothermia. Drink 2-3 liters of water during the day.
- Physical activity warms you up. If cold, move!
